PRESS RELEASE

EPPA is looking forward to participation in the fair in Nuremberg

Brussels - 22 October 2021. EPPA welcomes the announcement by the organisers of Nürnberg Messe that the internationally important and world's leading trade fair for window and door technology, Fensterbau Frontale, will be held as a presence event next year.

Of course, this announcement is always subject to the condition that the rules and regulations in force at that time make it possible to participate on site.

EPPA Managing Director Charlotte Röber explains: "We as the European industry association will also be represented with a booth at the fair. Also for us it is important to seek the personal exchange with relevant market companions in order to discuss the important industry topics of the future." That is why, on the one hand, they welcome the fact that the fair will be held again and, on the other hand, that most EPPA members will be strongly represented on the fair as well. The business of profile manufacturers requires personal encounters with their partner companies and the resulting customer proximity. This is why Fensterbau Frontale is an essential element of the relationship with window manufacturers.

EPPA trusts that Nürnberg Messe will continue to develop its hygiene concept in the coming months and optimise it in the interests of the companies. All exhibitors need a clearly defined framework for their presence, in which they can move around and receive guests. Even though it is clear to all participants that the new edition of the fair will certainly have a somewhat different character than in 2018, EPPA is once again looking forward to immediate feedback from customers on the new features and innovations to be expected.

"I understand that planning for the fair has already started in the industry. We are looking forward to the constructive dialogue with visitors and the important market companions in the other sectors. All in all, a very pleasing perspective," concludes EPPA President Patrick Seitz.
